She lies on the sand point near where the wreck is, with her outside guard above water. The point where the accident occurred is in Lake Pepin, about nine miles below Red Wing. The night was very dark, and the wind blew violently, and the Enterprise was running near the shore to avoid the heavy swell of the lake. Captain Harry Holmes was in command at the time. The Ham-burg sunk in 1856. We learn from the St. Paul Press of the 19th, that a barge containing five hundred bars of iron for the Winona and St. Peter rallroad, which was being towed up by the Favorite, was capsized Sunday night at the head of the slough five miles above Lacrosse. All but twelve bars slid off and went down in eighteen feet of water. It is now being recovered from the river.
